„Quae legerent omnes, quondam dabat Itala tellus,

Nunc e Pannonia carmina missa legit.

Magna quidem nobis haec gloria; sed tibi maior,

Nobilis ingenio, patria facta, meo!”

(Laus Pannoniae – Janus Pannonius)

The curiosities and information gathered for our guests reveal a lot about this wonderful Mediterranean environment, including the historical and cultural values of the city of Pécs.

PÉCS

In German: Fünfkirchen, in Croatian: Pečuh, in Serbian: Печуј/Pečuj, in the Middle Ages in Latin: Quinque Ecclesiae, in ancient times in Latin: Sopianae is a County town in the southwestern part of Hungary, it is the fifth-largest settlement in the country after Budapest, Debrecen, Szeged, and Miskolc. It is the largest settlement in Transdanubia. It is the seat of Baranya County and the district of Pécs, the center of Southern Transdanubia.

For those who are wondering what real-time travel can be like, this is our recommended program to roam the city of Pécs, where two millennia of history surrounds people from the Roman-era early Christian cemetery to the Turkish mosque to the museum quarter.

In the countryside inhabited by the Celtic and Pannonian tribes in the early 2nd century, the Romans founded a city called Sopianae. By the 4th century, the settlement had become a provincial seat and one of the major centers of early Christianity. The building complex of early Christian burial chambers from this period was inscribed on the World Heritage List (Cella Septichora) by the UNESCO World Heritage Committee in December 2000.

In 1009, King St. Stephen has founded the bishopric, and in 1367 King Louis the Great founded the first Hungarian university in Pécs. Medieval Pécs was made one of the centers of the country's cultural and artistic life by Bishop Janus Pannonius, a great poet of Hungarian humanism and the most prominent representative of Latin-language Hungarian poetry.

After 150 years of the Turkish occupation - from this period our rich architectural monuments have survived, such as the mosque of Pasha Gaz Gazi in the main square of the city. In 1780, Pécs received the rank of a free royal city from Queen Maria Theresa. After that, strong civilization and economic development began. Industrialization accelerated significantly in the first half of the 19th century, with Zsolnay pottery, Littke champagne, and Angster organ becoming world-famous.

The city offers many opportunities for recreation and culture. Named the European Capital of Culture in 2010, Pécs's truly vibrant intellectual life is characterized by hosting the University Days (PEN), the Wine Song Festival, and the Outdoor Games, the Pécs Days, the Festival of Light or the National Theater Meeting (POSZT) festivals. This way, everyone can find the right one for their needs, be it a lover of classical or light music.

We can take walks in the cozy little streets of the city, but if we feel like it, we can sit in the Pécs National Theatre for a performance, in case one would fancy exercise, a hike in the Mecsek is always great, but we can also relax in the parks in the city centre. If required, it is possible to discover the beauties of our city, as well as the surrounding places, with the help of a tour or tour guide, indicated at our reception

FIBULA

During the 5-year archaeological excavations in the 4000 m² area of our complex, almost 4,000 Roman coins were found in the ground, as well as a fibula, which we might even call today a safety needle, worn by Emperor Diocletian's soldiers as a costume ornament. The higher a soldier was, the larger the size of the fibula he wore. Thus, the fibula found in our area, with its length of 13 cm, made of bronze and decorated with gold, is one of the most valuable, priceless jewels, which has been exhibited at the Janus Pannonius Archaeological Museum, or is just a “country traveler”. The onion-head fibula found gave the idea to the hotel owners, thus commemorating the past so that this interesting Latin word is not forgotten. Hence the name of the hotel.

TÜKE

As a resident of Pécs and as a visitor to Pécs, we can come across this word in countless cases. Eg Tüke bus, Tüke Prize etc. Even as local, many people are unaware of its exact meaning, so now we are going to tell you this “secret” of what it means.

Previously, the descendants of the families of Pécs who had a small vineyard and press house on the Deindol, Makár, or Szkókó hills of the Mecsek Hills were called to their mirror. Like the vineyard, which does not bother with transplantation, the children of the native families of Pécs did not break away from the city.

The family of a “Tüke” has lived in Pécs for at least 3 generations (parent, grandparent, and great-grandparent), so it has deep roots like the vine.

Nowadays, the Tüke Prize is awarded every year to a citizen of Pécs who works for Pécs and helps the development of our hometown, who has done a lot to preserve the city's reputation.

TÜKE – FOUNTAIN

At the western end of Citrom Street (the southern street of our complex) is the Tüke ornamental well opposite the Post Office Palace, with eosin glazed inserts made of Zsolnay pyrogranite ceramics, which show the ancient vines twisting together and clinging to their roots.

CIRFANDLI

In Hungary, this dense, light red berry grape variety, Cirfandli, is grown exclusively in the Pécs region of the Mecsekalja wine region. They are bottled from dry to sweet wines.

ZSOLNAY Quarter

Among the many sights of the city, the Zsolnay Cultural Quarter, which was declared Hungarian in 2014, stands out. The Zsolnay family, known for their porcelain production, lived and worked in this place in the 19th and 20th centuries.

EOZIN

At the National Millennium Exhibition in 1896, Vilmos Zsolnay presented his technique called eosin in the wake of the Greek “eos” (dawn), which was an undivided success. The production of eosin still requires handicrafts, and its special feature is the iridescent light of the surfaces in addition to the rich color scheme.

SAFAER

The porcelain faience, decorated with high-fire glaze, won a gold medal at the 1878 Paris World's Fair. The Zsolnay factory established its world reputation with this technology. It was characterized by a slightly embossed high-fire glaze

Applied to a yellowish base glaze, in an extremely varied color with a gold contour. The decoration was drawn primarily from Hungarian folk art and the art of the Middle East, and the 1880s onwards in China and Japan.
